

Christine Cole

Chris Cole, a life-long sustainable living freak, has played a life-long game challenging herself to make anything and everything in her home – including her home, to varying degrees of beauty. Using excess saplings or wood from the transfer station, she regularly makes bed frames, tables, chairs, arbors, stools, hangers, and, of course, shelves. Everyone who comes into her house is heard to say: I could make that. And you can, join her.

Chris is a self-taught shoemaker, is the author of THE MAKE-IT YOURSELF SHOEBOOK (A.A. Knopf) (under Name of Christine Lewis Clark). She has made shoes, sandals, moccasins and boots by hand for people for decades and taught her simple methods privately and at Shelte Institute, Maine College of Art, Oregon School of Arts and Crafts, , Haystack and Merriconeag Waldorf School.

Students have ranged from age 12 on up; No previous experience is needed at all. From this course you will be able to see how you can make all of your family footwear and make much of what is needed in your home.
