

Debbie Atwood

Debbie Atwood is an avid gardener, living in Brunswick. Her goal is to grow as much of her family's food as possible and she's had a great time experimenting with different plants and techniques along the way, with varying degrees of success (there was the zucchini crop failure of 2010, for example).

Debbie is a Master Gardener and enjoys passing along her love of gardening. She started learning about seed saving many years ago after prying open a dead marigold flower and finding that it had dozens of seeds inside. Could it be that easy?

Join her to learn about seed saving techniques and about taking control of your home gardening experience.

View Debbie's Courses: Introduction to Seed Saving